American Institute of Biological Sciences

PUBLICATION AGREEMENT

The American Institute of Biological Sciences accepts for publication in BioScience your manuscript tentatively titled _____ (MS# _____). By signing this agreement, you transfer to the American Institute of Biological Sciences the exclusive world rights comprised in the article's copyright to reproduce and distribute the article, including reprints, photographic reproductions, microfilm, electronic data processing (including programming, storage, and transmission to other electronic data records), or any other similar reproductions, and translations.

AIBS, in turn, grants to you the following rights:

1. All propriety rights other than copyright, such as patent rights.
2. The right to reuse all or part of your work in a book, chapter, or article by you.
3. The right to make your work available after publication in BioScience, in print or electronically, for non-commercial, educational, or research purposes.
4. The right to reuse figures, tables, and up to 250 words of text from your work for any purpose.
5. (a) The right to present the material in your work orally in any forum; (b) the right, after the work is published in BioScience, to have the presentation included as part of the forum's published proceedings.

All copies and uses made of the work under any of the conditions described above must include notice of the publisher's copyright. In the case of Web posting, we request a link to the version of the article as published in BioScience.

In the case of work prepared under US Government contract, the US Government may reproduce, royalty free, all or portions of the article and may authorize others to do so, for official US Government purposes only, if the contract so requires. If this applies to your manuscript, please sign on the appropriate line below.

If a US Government employee prepares a work as part of his/her official duties, it is a "work of the US Government" and cannot be copyrighted. If the work is not part of the employee's official duties, it may be copyrighted. If one or more of a group of coauthors are US Government employees, the authors must determine whether the manuscript is a work of the US Government. If this applies to your manuscript, please sign on the appropriate line below.

WARRANTY: You warrant that this manuscript is your original work, that you have the right to assign its copyright, and that it has not been previously submitted or published elsewhere; or that if the work has been accepted or published elsewhere, you will submit written permission from that publication to publish, reprint, or adapt this material in both print and online formats. Any drafts of the work that were displayed on a publicly accessible Web site have been removed. You warrant that the work contains no libelous or unlawful statements and does not infringe on the rights of others; you agree to indemnify AIBS against any contrary claims. You also agree to submit to the BioScience editors, before the manuscript's publication, written permission from any copyright owner(s) whose work is excerpted or otherwise reprinted or adapted in your manuscript to republish this material in both print and online formats.

You agree to pay applicable page charges and artwork charges.

If these terms are satisfactory, please sign and date this agreement and return a copy to the BioScience editors.
